Our vision

VACCHO's vision is that Aboriginal people will have a high quality of health and wellbeing, thus enabling individuals and communities to reach their full potential in life.

Who we are

VACCHO is the peak body for Aboriginal health in Victoria. It is the leading advocate for the health of Aboriginal people and a peak organisation to its Membership.

VACCHO promotes and supports its 28 Members as centers of: excellence in the provision of Aboriginal health services; their community; expertise in the priorities, needs and models of service for those communities; and excellence to advocate on their behalf.

Nationally, VACCHO represents the Community Controlled Health Sector through its affiliation and membership on the board of the National Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisation (NACCHO).

State and Federal Governments formally recognise the leadership that VACCHO provides as the peak representative organisation on Aboriginal Health in Victoria.

Chairperson's report

VACCHO is first and foremost an Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisation. It exists to support the Member services and to make a difference to the inequities in health outcomes for Aboriginal people. With this in mind, it is pleasing to begin this Report by noting that Members' meetings are becoming stronger and stronger with lively engagement by representatives from all over Victoria and with more stakeholders wanting to come to see what's in our space.

As Members we all appreciate the efforts of Jill Gallagher AO and VACCHO staff to support us and our programs, our services and our communities. However it is only by maintaining a high level of engagement that we are able to do what we do best and assist VACCHO to do what it does brilliantly.

Our Strategic Plan 2013-16 is based on principles of quality. It focusses on supporting quality in the workforce, in service delivery, in infrastructure, in policy and advocacy, in partnerships and networks and, most importantly, in supporting Aboriginal cultural qualities. The commitment to quality goes from top to bottom. The Board has undergone significant training and professional development in order to improve how we do our business thoroughly and professionally. This helps VACCHO meet its accreditation standards under ISO accreditation and helps us do our business as a Board, serving the Members and providing executive services to VACCHO. This has led to a range of new systems and processes at Board meetings to make sure we can sign off on the new standards and provide evidence of our best practice.

Quality is a broad issue. We are all expected to comply with numerous quality frameworks and industry standards. In the past 12 months the VACCHO Board, along with the Boards of Member services, has been coming to grips with increasing expectations about 'good governance' and 'risk frameworks'. VACCHO's Sector Quality Improvement Unit expanded this year to include the Accreditation Team. This Unit has provided excellent support for our Members to succeed in the OATSIH Risk Assessment, achieving both health service and whole-of-organisation accreditation and improving corporate governance. It is a credit to the Unit that they are highly regarded across the country and have been called upon by other National Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisation (NACCHO) Affiliates to assist in developing their capacity.

The sustainability of VACCHO is underpinned by its strategic objectives, with a commitment to retain and grow the level of support and funding from Government and to explore business opportunities for the future growth of VACCHO. Recently VACCHO has been engaging in activities that have either generated or have the potential to generate income, undertaking fee-for-service activities that enable us to contribute to the growth and sustainability of VACCHO. The organisation will continue to explore economic development opportunities that can strengthen our growth and increase our support to Members.

Being Chairperson of an organisation like VACCHO is made easier when the CEO, managers and staff are clearly committed to making a difference. I want to thank the Education and Training Unit for their hard work this year, supporting the development of a skilled Aboriginal workforce and in particular for developing the Cultural Safety Training Program – a first for Victoria AGAIN.

I want to thank Jill Gallagher AO for her inspirational leadership. Just two of her achievements this year have been to co-chair the Victorian Expert Advisory Committee on Aboriginal Health with the secretary of the Victorian Health Department and to launch Reporting Racism on behalf of the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission (VEOHRC). It is no coincidence that Jill received national recognition in the form of the Order of Australia award for her commitment to Aboriginal health. Congratulations Jill.

Finally, I want to thank the Members. Without your support VACCHO would not exist and we should remember that VACCHO is here to assist both our community and services and to move the sector forward ... our greatest strength is our Members.

Jason B. King
Chairperson

Chief Executive Officer's report

VACCHO has had another active and busy year. This is due to the magnificent efforts of our dedicated staff at VACCHO and the incredible engagement and support of the Members.

The Members' meetings remain inspirational, wide ranging and engaging. We cover a variety of subject matter, working together as people who share so much in common, share our successes and frustrations and work collaboratively on the challenges we face individually and collectively.

VACCHO saw the year in with its new Strategic Plan 2013-16. This Plan guides the direction of VACCHO in the domains of Quality Workforce, Quality Services, Quality Infrastructure, Quality Policy Development and Advocacy, Quality Partnerships and Networks and Aboriginal Cultural Qualities. The focus on quality underpins all our planning and Member support activities. It is the key to making the health service system more responsive to community needs and achieving better health outcomes for Aboriginal people in Victoria.

VACCHO and the Members continue to expand the services we can provide and improve the quality of the ones we have. We have been able to engage in dialogue around emerging issues that matter such as aged care, an increasing need for our Elders across the state, and in the development of Disability Care Australia. VACCHO has been working successfully at the State and National level on the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA), working closely with Wathaurong Aboriginal Cooperative which is one of the pilot sites for the new NDIA.

VACCHO was involved in the restructure of the Victorian Advisory Council on Koori Health (VACKH). Together with the Department of Health Victoria and the Federal Department of Health and Ageing, VACCHO will monitor and advise on implementation of the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Plan and the Victorian strategic directions for Aboriginal health, Koolin Balit. We have also advised and supported work of hospital CEOs in their signing and supporting the Statement of Intent on Aboriginal Health Equality.

We know that the health of Aboriginal people is not only the responsibility of the health sector. Broader social determinants must also be addressed and we have actively engaged in the area of justice, where we see continuing over-representation of Aboriginal people and consequent health and family issues that come about through incarceration and involvement with the justice system. VACCHO has supported the work of the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission (VEOHRC) in examining the rates of imprisonment of Aboriginal women in Victoria. We have committed to evidence-based policy in 'justice reinvestment', highlighting prevention and services to people before they come in contact with and are damaged by the prison system.

One of my personal highlights for the year was to join a small team from VACCHO on the Journey to Recognition, the campaign to recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in Australia's Constitution. This journey is a people's movement to finally recognise the rich and impressive history of Australia's unique cultures in our founding document. Acknowledging that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people were here for tens of thousands of years before Federation is the right thing to do. Recognition will do a lot for our people. I think if we get recognition we can move forward in leaps and bounds. I believe it will heal a lot of wounds and say to First Australians that we are an important part of this country.

We as Aboriginal people are the experts and leaders in addressing Aboriginal needs and VACCHO stands proud as an Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisation. With new challenges to add to the old, with new programs and expanded services, VACCHO continues to serve its community with professionalism, with wisdom and with vigour. VACCHO has shown how strong and effective it can be as an advocate for the Aboriginal community.

The Victorian Government has committed to an increase of 30% in its Aboriginal health investment and to work closely with the Aboriginal community to implement the Koolin Balit strategic plan for Aboriginal health. We watch National developments with interest.

This report gives a snapshot of the hard work and dedication of everyone associated with VACCHO. Our Board and our staff are dedicated to supporting our Members and, through them, to improving services and health outcomes in our community. I thank them for their ongoing commitment and support throughout the year.

VACCHO Strategic Priorities

VACCHO is committed to providing the highest quality service to its Members, partners and stakeholders and to continually review and improve its services and relationships.

Sustainability

VACCHO sustainability is underpinned by its strategic objectives and commitment to corporate social responsibility by building organisational capability in the following three ways:

Economic

Retain and grow the level of financial and in-kind commitment from government and stakeholders.

Commencement of activities that are generating or have the potential to generate income. These include development and delivery of Cultural Safety Training, provision of Accreditation Facilitation support, outsourcing graphic design and the hiring of training and meeting rooms.

Environmental

A commitment to the environment by caring for Country, the ongoing encouragement of a smokefree workplace and the establishment of the Green Team which advises VACCHO on a broad range of relevant issues.

Social

VACCHO is committed to ensuring that social needs can be met and sustained through:

- demonstrating accountability to sustain a well trained workforce
- embedding cultural values
- considering community expectations.

The background features a light blue gradient with intricate white geometric patterns. These patterns include a grid of squares, a series of concentric squares, and a complex arrangement of hexagons. The patterns are overlaid on a series of white, wavy, organic lines that sweep across the page. In the lower-left quadrant, there are two stylized white symbols resembling the letter 'Y' or a similar geometric shape.

Aboriginal cultural qualities

To identify and implement in the daily operations of VACCHO a range of activities which express the diverse cultures of Victoria's Aboriginal communities.

As an Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisation VACCHO aims to ensure that recognition and promotion of Aboriginal culture remains central in our work. A key component of this is developing Aboriginal staff within VACCHO and the Membership.

VACCHO recognises that the Aboriginal Community Controlled sector offers a springboard and supportive environment for Aboriginal people to obtain a first and further qualification. Many Aboriginal people working in Government and private sectors obtain an initial qualification while employed at an Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisation (ACCHO). A number of Aboriginal staff at VACCHO have completed or are working toward completion of a primary or further qualification. VACCHO is also working with Career Trackers to afford Aboriginal students studying health science degrees opportunities for an internship with VACCHO.

services and their regional Medicare Locals to support culturally respectful engagement through various initiatives such as Aboriginal Outreach Workers (AOW), telehealth and ehealth support as well as the Care Coordination and Supplementary Services Program (CCSS). The Coalition for Aboriginal Health Equality Victoria, coordinated through the Policy and Advocacy Unit, provides a major opportunity to work with a wide range of organisations to advocate for cultural safety in service development and delivery.

The Corporate Services Unit and Communications Team has worked with other Units to develop a database of Victorian Aboriginal imagery for VACCHO publications and internal infrastructure. All VACCHO staff are encouraged to participate in various community and cultural events with the majority of staff participating in NAIDOC events, particularly the NAIDOC March.

Smoking Ceremony and Welcome for VACCHO staff at Worawa Aboriginal College

The Education and Training Unit provides a number of courses aimed at providing Aboriginal staff within VACCHO Member services with qualifications and professional development. We also partner with a number of organisations to deliver qualifications and professional development for Aboriginal staff in the VACCHO Membership. The Public Health and Research Unit has also been researching the progress of the 'gettin em n keepin em' Report in Victoria to assess accessibility of nursing degrees for Aboriginal people.

Cultural safety remains a key issue in our recruiting and induction processes for new staff. More widely, VACCHO promotes cultural safety professional development through the newly established Cultural Safety Training Program within the Education and Training Unit. This is quickly becoming a sought-after service as a business initiative for VACCHO and provides an opportunity for staff members across all Units to be involved in promoting cultural awareness, knowledge and respect. The Public Health and Research Unit has engaged with Member

Workforce

To assist the development of a creative, knowledgeable, skilled, experienced and committed workforce of employees and voluntary governing bodies in Aboriginal community controlled and mainstream organisations including the public service, non-government organisations and private enterprise.

A large percentage of work undertaken across VACCHO has involved raising awareness, increasing knowledge and improving skills for people working across the health sector. Our Education and Training Unit remains the leading provider of Aboriginal Health Worker (AHW) training in Victoria, actively identifying and delivering training programs to meet ACCHO needs. In addition to the specialised AHW training and range of health promotion and management development courses the Education and Training Unit has been developing, marketing and delivering Cultural Safety Training and similar programs for mainstream services. The Education and Training Unit has tendered for programs and projects that are of benefit to the ACCHO sector and are establishing training in regional centres with offerings in Aboriginal health work to members of community in assisting them to return to study or to seek employment.

ensuring we have a positive impact on quality, recruitment and retention. Statewide forums have been coordinated through the Health Programs Unit and Sector Quality Improvement Unit to provide networking opportunities and promote peer learning. These forums also ensure that VACCHO has current and relevant information to support our advocacy role with Governments, the wider health service provider system and within the ACCHO sector. Forums have been conducted for Social Emotional Wellbeing (SEWB), Maternity Services, Palliative Care Services, Improving Care for Aboriginal Patients (ICAP), Koori Mental Health Liaison Officers (KMHLO) and Quality and Accreditation programs. The Public Health and Research Unit held a healthy lifestyles forum in late 2012 where approximately 70 health promotion and health workers received education around issues such as diabetes, heart and kidney disease, smoking, nutrition and physical activity. The Smoking Cessation Team has partnered

Claire Orrill and Jimi Peters, VACCHO, presenting at the VACCHO Healthy Lifestyle State Forum 2012

Increasing professional recognition for AHWs has been a priority for VACCHO over a long period of time. Since Aboriginal Health Practitioner (AHP) registration commenced in July 2012 the Workforce Issues Unit has been actively encouraging and promoting eligible AHWs to apply for AHP registration. The Unit has also been encouraging AHWs to become members of the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Worker Association (NATSIHWA). AHPs now join 13 other professions regulated under the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency. Victoria currently has 45 AHW NATSIHWA members and six registered AHPs.

Following the successful AHW Scope of Practice pilot in three ACCHSs, the Workforce Issues Unit is currently planning a phased state-wide regional roll out commencing with the Western District region.

Providing the ACCHO workforce with access to professional development opportunities is key to with the VACCHO Education and Training Unit, Quit and the Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Tobacco Control to conduct smoking cessation training which has been delivered to well over 100 participants. The Sexual Health Team has held five Hepatitis B workshops offering both clinical and public health messages as well as four Certificate 3 Aboriginal Health Worker Sexual Health training sessions.

The Nutrition and Physical Activity Team was active in providing Aboriginal health diabetes education at the Institute of Koorie Education, Deakin University, Geelong, where they provided Nutritional Skill Set training for Aboriginal Health Workers. Through the Department of Health and Ageing Koori Family Lifestyle Project, they delivered a one day Child Obesity Awareness Training Program and distributed resources to 48 Health Promotion Workers.

Support for GP registrars and registrar training organisations continues with the updating of the orientation manuals for registrars. A virtual network for GPs is underway with a vision of developing education, information sharing and support into the future. VACCHO's support model for GP registrars in ACCHOs has been promoted nationally.

Our definition of 'workforce' within the sector includes senior management and Board members within ACCHOs. VACCHO coordinates the CEO Network, which ensures CEOs have a space to discuss issues affecting them and their organisations. The Corporate Services Unit

VACCHO has been recognised nationally as a leader within this area and the Unit has been working with affiliates in other States to build their capacity in the governance and organisational coaching aspect of Member support.

Workforce development outside the ACCHO sector is also a priority, ensuring that the Aboriginal community has access to culturally appropriate services. The Policy and Advocacy Unit has been active in addressing long-term workforce development to meet the needs of Aboriginal coordinates regular Members' meetings where CEOs, board members and senior staff can gain information and support in regard to a wide range of issues affecting the sector.

The Sector Quality Improvement Unit has provided ongoing coaching and support to build on the business systems literacy of Board and managers within our Member services. As well as face-to-face on-site support the Unit has developed a range of resource kits to assist Boards with their governance role. These cover topics that include risk management, Board recruitment and review, CEO selection and retention and governance principles.

people with disabilities and those in aged care.

Internally, VACCHO's commitment to quality is demonstrated through the engagement of a Document Management and Quality Project Officer within the Corporate Services Unit. This position has greatly enhanced VACCHO's commitment to quality management through supporting staff to gain an understanding of what 'quality' means in the workplace and to make effective use of the Quality Management System used to manage our administrative processes. Several staff members have undertaken Auditor and Lead Auditor training to enhance quality services and commitment.

Services

To ensure that VACCHO's services meet the needs of Members, stakeholders and communities, VACCHO seeks to sustain and build upon the capacity of Members to achieve their potential in the business of delivering services to the Aboriginal community. We seek to influence all providers of programs designed to address health needs and the social determinants of health to effectively deliver services to Aboriginal people in a manner which is culturally appropriate.

A small internal restructure saw the Accreditation Support Team joining the Sector Quality Improvement Unit. This has enabled VACCHO to develop an integrated approach to supporting Members with accreditation, governance and risk management. The Unit is continuously reviewing and improving resources, activities and skills to ensure the most contemporary, effective support is available to the community controlled sector in implementing mainstream standards and compliance requirements.

Accreditation support continues to be a critical service to Members as an increasing number of accreditations and changes to industry standards are imposed on the sector.

Unit the Medicare Enhancement Officer has been working closely with Members on issues regarding Medicare billings and has produced new resources for the Medicare Benefits Schedule (MBS) items concerned with GP management plans, telehealth and other MBS items. Practice Health Atlas reports have been produced, analysed and presented back to eight Members with great interest and have triggered improvements in data entry and created increases in MBS billing. Profiles using the Australian Bureau of Statistics and other available public data were created for all Members and distributed.

With some Members undertaking an average of seven separate accreditations per year and the majority averaging 2-3 per year, the team has been busy and were successful in assisting 100% of Members requesting support to gain or maintain their accreditation status across a broad range of accreditations, including health service-specific (AGPAL, QICSA) and organisation-wide (ISO, QIC). The Unit responded to 100% of high priority requests for governance or organisational coaching services, with several organisations on the waiting list for governance coaching.

Within the Public Health and Research

Unit has developed programs that focus on leadership and modern business processes relevant to the capacity, capability and organisational development needs of ACCHOs.

Support for establishing 'quality services' within the sector includes promoting a range of National and State guidelines and service development activities. The Health Programs Unit and Policy and Advocacy Unit has worked with Members and the sector workforce to ensure that services reflect best practice. Examples of this work include: Koori Maternity Services (KMS) Guidelines, SEWB counselling services, National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention Strategy, ICAP and KMHLO Guidelines, Alcohol and Other Drugs Reform, Mental Health Reform, Psychiatric Disability Rehabilitation and Support Services Reform and the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples Drug Strategy.

The Public Health and Research Unit has provided resources and support to Members through a range of health promotion activities including revision of the successful Tucker Tips and Healthy Tucker Cards resources produced by the Nutrition and Physical Activity and Quality Project Officer actively contributes to maintaining our accreditation and the implementation of the Quality Management System. The Document Management and Quality Project Officer coordinated preparation for the accreditation surveillance visit and the appointment of a new Senior Human Resources Advisor has added value to our policy and procedure review process. Our Member Support Officer continually seeks and obtains feedback from our Members and stakeholders to assist in ensuring quality services for Members are provided and that issues arising for Members can be addressed

Team. The Sexual Health Team was closely involved in gathering national data on youth sexual health and worked with Ilbjerri Theatre Company to develop a schools education program about blood borne viruses and their risks. The Smoking Cessation Team significantly increased the number of Member services who have successfully initiated a smoke free workplace or are moving close to achieving smoke free status.

Internally, VACCHO's commitment to quality services is reflected through maintaining ISO Accreditation. Within the Corporate Services Unit the Document Management at upcoming Members' meetings, CEO network forums, etc.

VACCHO has established a number of subcommittees that report to the Managers' meeting and engage staff from all Units in active participation in quality improvement. Committees include: Management Review, Occupational Health and Safety, Operations, Publications, Quality and Green Team. The Sector Quality Improvement Unit also conducted workshops with each Unit to build knowledge and capacity around risk management and quality systems.

Infrastructure

To secure the human and capital resources necessary to maintain and enhance the activities of VACCHO and our Member organisations.

The Policy and Advocacy Unit advocates for appropriate investment in infrastructure both as bricks and mortar and in information technology. VACCHO has spent considerable time promoting the coordinated investment in appropriate infrastructure both within VACCHO and for its Members. They supported Aboriginal Affairs Victoria's work in scoping the Members' needs and now seek investment in meeting those needs. The Unit supports individual Member's proposals and have drafted position papers with NACCHO for national investment in Victorian ACCHO infrastructure. They have also championed the need for improved infrastructure within the sector through their partnerships with the Coalition for Aboriginal Health Equality Victoria.

The Corporate Services Unit commenced development of a new Information Technology (IT) Strategy. It will assist us with document management and mobility, necessary for our effective operation as well as contributing to our continued accreditation and risk management. With changing IT and the rise of social media the Strategy will also include the media and communication requirements for VACCHO.

Partnerships and networks

To develop and enhance partnerships and networks with key organisations to improve the accessibility and quality of health services and programs for Aboriginal people.

VACCHO is keenly aware that provision of services to the wider Aboriginal community does not happen in a vacuum and that we need to be able to work with a wide range of key stakeholders, including Government departments, researchers, peak bodies and service providers.

Nationally, we participate in various meetings and forums led by NACCHO including CEO network meetings, Sector Governance Network, Public Health Medical Officer Network and the Accreditation Network. VACCHO is actively involved with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Registered Training Organisation National Network. We are also in regular contact with key personnel of the Federal and State offices of the Office for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health (OATSIH).

Our relationship with State Government exists on a number of levels, including participation in the VACKH and its subcommittees. Further, regular executive level meetings with key Department personnel ensure that fruitful dialogue is maintained.

VACCHO convenes the Coalition for Aboriginal Health Equality Victoria which brings together key people from a range of peak bodies and Statewide service organisations. VACCHO also advises on partnership strategies with Victorian hospitals and Medicare Locals through forums convened by the Victorian Health Minister. Relationships with key representative bodies are continuing to improve the possibility of collaboration and improved relationships for our Members and will lead to better outcomes for service access and delivery for the Aboriginal community.

We maintain close relationships with a range of issue-specific organisations that enables VACCHO to be involved with the development of culturally appropriate service delivery. The Health Programs Unit has engaged with a range of organisations in order to develop policies, resources and training activities. These include beyondblue, Palliative Care Victoria, Australian Drug Foundation, Maternity Services Education Program, Wullumperi – Melbourne Sexual Health Centre and the Victorian Alcohol and Drug Association.

The Public Health and Research Unit has created partnerships with Cancer Council Victoria, Asthma Foundation, Heart Foundation, Kidney Health Australia and Family Planning Victoria to address chronic disease management and prevention. The Sexual Health Team was a key participant in completing the national GOANNA survey in association with the Kirby Institute and NACCHO. The Nutrition and Physical Activity Team established a Memorandum of Understanding with Second Bite, a food distribution organisation, and linked Members into that program. The team has also maintained its close relationship with Diabetes Australia Victoria.

Through the Medicare Enhancement Officer, VACCHO is represented on the Royal Women's Hospital Aboriginal Women's Health Committee and the Eye Health Project Officer has further developed relationships with the Indigenous Eye Health Unit at the University of Melbourne, Victorian College of Optometry and the Royal Victorian Eye and Ear Hospital. The Public Health and Research Unit received 16 applications for research partnerships of which seven were approved as they supported VACCHO's core business and were resource appropriate.

The Sector Quality Improvement Unit and the Policy and Advocacy Unit have maintained productive working relationships with a range of funding bodies, other peak bodies and key stakeholders. This has led to successful outcomes for our Members when requiring advocacy or policy support.

In partnership with Rural Workforce Agency Victoria (RWAV) the Workforce Issues Unit continued to provide targeted cultural awareness training for GPs. The training is developed and run in accordance with the accredited Royal Australian College of General Practitioners, Continuing Medical Education points system. This successful program not only prepares GPs for working with Aboriginal clients but has also resulted in over 10 GPs being placed in ACCHSs as well as several locum placements. Under the successful Medical Specialist Outreach Assistance Program - Indigenous Chronic Disease / Urban Specialist Outreach Assistance Program (MSOAP-ICD/USOAP) initiative and in partnership with RWAV, all ACCHSs are now providing many allied health and specialist services that would otherwise not have been available.

Through the Corporate Services Unit, the Communications Team has been working with Bunjilaka (Museum Victoria) to establish culturally responsible interior exhibition spaces for Aboriginal artworks and artefacts and to educate VACCHO staff members on the culturally appropriate process involved when documenting Aboriginal artefacts.

Policy development and advocacy

To influence government policy and stakeholders to effectively address the health needs of Aboriginal people in Victoria.

VACCHO has maintained a strong presence in the political landscape, with Jill Gallagher AO co-chairing the Victorian Expert Advisory Committee on Aboriginal Health with the Secretary of the Department of Health. With the Victorian Health Minister, Jill co-chaired Australia's first national forum on partnership and success in Aboriginal health. VACCHO will also be co-chairing the Victorian Government's Advisory Committee on Aboriginal Disability. In April 2013 the Victorian Premier, the Hon. Dr. Dennis Napthine, announced a 30% increase in funding for the State Close the Gap initiative, recognising the key role that VACCHO and Members play in improving Aboriginal health outcomes.

The Policy and Advocacy Unit has provided significant input to the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Strategy and to the OATSIH Primary Health Care Funding Review. Unit staff have provided considerable input into developments within aged care and with Disability Care Australia, where VACCHO is providing leadership and support at local, State and National levels. VACCHO has reviewed the role and responsibility of the VACKH to make it the advisory and priority setting body for the National and State Strategies and to more efficiently identify and make recommendations to Governments. VACCHO also leads the Coalition for Aboriginal Health Equality Victoria which includes a number of peak bodies and health issues organisations who have signed the Statement of Intent to improve their programs and to collectively hold Government to account.

VACCHO continues to provide high level advice on the different reviews of major health reforms and service system development including maternal and child services, hospital liaison, drug and alcohol services and social and emotional wellbeing services such as mental health, suicide prevention, psychiatric disability and rehabilitation support.

The Health Programs Unit works collaboratively with mainstream organisations and funding bodies to advocate for the needs of our workforces and Members. Unit staff facilitate a range of forums, steering committees, regional gatherings and site visits to promote effective service strategies in response to critical health and social issues. Activities of particular note include conducting a series of community forums held across the State to consider issues raised by Members in relation to the use of the methamphetamine 'ice'. The Senate Inquiry into Palliative Care held in Melbourne provided an opportunity to showcase the successes of the Victorian Aboriginal Palliative Care Project on a National level. This provided increased exposure for further work to ensure Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people can access culturally appropriate palliative care.

The Public Health and Research Unit completed and partnered in many areas of research which will subsequently influence policy. Issues addressed include Koori prisoner mental health and cognitive functioning, ACCHO-prison health partnerships, Aboriginal nursing recruitment and retention research and research into the duration and experience of breastfeeding in Aboriginal mothers. The Nutrition and Physical Activity Team launched the Aboriginal Early Childhood Nutrition and Physical Activity needs assessment.

Through the Sector Quality Improvement Unit VACCHO has lead or participated in key events to raise the profile of, advocate for or develop policy papers on several key issues related to governance, risk management, accreditation, compliance and business systems for the sector. In partnership with Latrobe University the Unit has undertaken a project designed to measure the costs of compliance in relation to accreditation and reporting, which will be completed next financial year.

Through its membership and representation on key committees and networks representing Aboriginal interests – Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Registered Training Organisation National Network, VACKH – the Education and Training Unit continues to contribute to discussion and policy development in relation to recognition of Aboriginal Health Workers and broader matters related to workforce.

Memorandum of Understanding update

VACCHO maintains Memorandums of Understanding with the following key stakeholders:

- Australian Catholic University
- Alzheimer's Australia
- SecondBite
- Diabetes Australia Victoria

A Memorandum of Understanding or MOU is a documented agreement that sets out how a partnership arrangement will operate. It provides guidance towards ensuring a clear understanding of each party's responsibilities and framework for conflict resolution. MOUs are not legally binding documents though do provide necessary structure to the collaborative process and help ensure no unrealistic expectations arise.
